

Groundwater and You

Average Depth to Groundwater - Fresno Irrigation District

Throughout most of California's great Central Valley, residents, businesses, industries and farms draw more groundwater than has been replenished by nature or recharge actions by agencies.

At the peak of California's record-breaking 2012-2016 drought, the State legislature passed the Sustainable Groundwater Management Act (SGMA) of 2014. SGMA requires local public agencies form Groundwater Sustainability Agencies (GSA) to implement and comply with the law's requirements beginning Jan. 31, 2020. SGMA implementation in the greater Fresno metropolitan region is provided by the North Kings GSA, a joint powers authority formed in 2016. The NKGSA is responsible for preparation, adoption and implementation of a SGMA-compliant Groundwater Sustainability Plan that will address issues connected with a near 100-foot decline in regional groundwater levels since 1922.
